

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

Methods and system for managing consent. Embodiments of the invention identify a user in connection with an application or service that requests to use selected information associated with the user according to a predefined policy. After determining whether the user previously granted permission to use the selected information according to the policy, the invention can notify the user if a change has been made to the policy since the user previously granted permission for the application to use the selected information and obtain re-consent. Other aspects of the invention are directed to computer-readable media for use with authentication, notification, and re-consent.